Required Strategic Changes — Industrial Relations

1. Upgrade the Core Positioning

Current:

Industrial Relations Advisor

Required:

Strategic Industrial Relations Advisor | Union Negotiations | Long-Term Settlements | Workforce Stability

“Industrial Relations Advisor” alone undersells the depth of his experience.

2. Position Him as Practitioner, Not Consultant

His strongest differentiator is decades of actual plant, union, workforce and management experience.

Communication should repeatedly establish:

Plant Floor Experience → Corporate HR Leadership → Complex Negotiations → Boardroom Advisory

This is stronger than generic IR consulting.

3. Make Negotiation & Settlements the Hero Expertise

Based on his profile, these should receive maximum prominence:

- Union negotiations.
- Long-term settlements.
- Wage negotiations.
- Multi-union environments.
- Productivity-linked settlements.
- Dispute de-escalation.

- Management-union alignment.

These are more differentiated than broad “workforce stability” language.

4. Strengthen Preventive IR

The current website discusses crisis management heavily.

His positioning should equally own:

Preventing industrial conflict before it becomes a crisis.

Add stronger emphasis on:

- Early-warning systems.
- Union relationship health.
- Grievance patterns.
- Leadership behaviour.
- Shop-floor communication.
- IR audits.
- Management preparedness.

Core philosophy:

Good IR is not crisis management.
It is making fewer crises necessary.

5. Elevate Boardroom Advisory

“Plant Advisory” currently sounds operational.

His seniority supports:

Boardroom + Plant-Level IR Advisory

Show that he can work with:

- CEOs.
- CHROs.
- Plant heads.
- HR heads.

- ER/IR teams.
- Corporate leadership.

He should be positioned as the person leadership calls before, during and after a critical IR situation.

6. Add Management Capability Building

Don't make the proposition dependent only on Dr. Singh personally solving disputes.

Add:

Building Management Capability for Industrial Relations

Areas:

- Negotiation preparedness.
- Handling union conversations.
- Plant-head IR orientation.
- Difficult conversations.
- Conflict de-escalation.
- IR leadership development.
- Management communication.

This moves him from problem solver → capability builder.

7. Reframe “Industrial Peace”

Reduce repeated language around:

- Peace.
- Harmony.
- Stability.

These are outcomes, but excessive use can make IR sound soft.

Balance them with:

- Productivity.
- Business continuity.
- Predictability.

- Trust.
- Governance.
- Workforce discipline.
- Operational resilience.

Desired Position

Stable employee relations that protect both people and business continuity.

8. Strengthen Business Impact

Connect IR directly to business outcomes.

Show how strong IR contributes to:

- Production continuity.
- Productivity.
- Cost predictability.
- Reduced disruption.
- Workforce confidence.
- Management bandwidth.
- Long-term planning.
- Organisational reputation.

IR should appear as a business discipline, not merely an HR discipline.

9. Use His Experience as Proof

The Journey section is valuable.

But each career stage should establish what capability it created.

For example:

Plant HR → Ground-Level Understanding

Multi-Plant Leadership → Complexity Management

SRF → Strategic IR & Long-Term Settlements

Independent Advisory → Boardroom Perspective

This makes the timeline strategically useful instead of biographical.

10. Validate Numerical Claims

Claims such as:

48+ Settlements

12+ Industries

Strike-Free Record

5–7 Year Settlements

should only remain if directly verifiable from his resumes/client records.

If not fully documented, soften or remove them.

For this profile, credibility matters more than impressive numbers.

11. Add Labour-Code Readiness

His current advisory work mentions Labour Codes, but this deserves greater prominence.

Add a territory around:

IR Readiness for India's Evolving Labour Framework

Position around:

- Management preparedness.
- Workforce implications.
- Policy alignment.
- Union communication.
- Transition planning.
- IR governance.

Keep legal advice clearly separate unless he is professionally qualified to provide it.

12. Add Confidential Crisis Advisory

This is a commercially strong offering and should remain discreet.

Position for situations such as:

- Union escalation.
- Strike threats.
- Difficult charters.
- Breakdown of management-union trust.
- Multi-union conflict.
- Sensitive workforce restructuring.
- Plant-level tension.

The language should feel:

Calm + Senior + Confidential + Experienced

Not alarmist.

13. Create IR Thought Leadership

His IR expertise should also generate authority content.

Recommended territories:

Before It Becomes a Dispute

Preventive IR observations.

Across the Table

Lessons from decades of negotiation.

The Plant Floor Perspective

Leadership lessons from manufacturing environments.

IR × Business

How employee relations decisions affect productivity and continuity.

This will differentiate his IR LinkedIn content from legal/compliance-heavy IR pages.

14. Reduce Generic HR Content

For this vertical, avoid drifting into:

- Generic employee engagement.
- Recruitment.
- HR trends.
- Motivation.
- General workplace culture.

Stay focused on:

Employee Relations + Unions + Negotiations + Manufacturing + Workforce Strategy + Business Continuity

Recommended IR Positioning Architecture

Strategic Industrial Relations Advisor

Primary identity

Union Negotiator & Settlement Specialist

Specialist capability

Most Important Change

Move the positioning from:

“I help organisations resolve industrial relations problems.”

to:

“I help leadership anticipate, negotiate and resolve complex workforce challenges before they disrupt the business.”

That is much closer to the seniority and depth his IR career supports.
